

Report: 2nd Interregional Congress of the Three Venetie

Last 21st January, the 2nd Interregional Congress was held in the prestigious old Municipal “Arrigoni” Theatre of San Vito al Tagliamento, the only theatre of the 700 with two orders of stages harmonically and perfectly renovated. Many people with a highly respectable scientific profile participated in the event both in the field of gastroenterology and surgery on the topic “Colic diverticular disease” that although is very debateable, doesn’t always obtain at present, unanimous consensus in diagnostics and in therapy.

Its success was predictable: early enrolment closed ten days in advance with 220 participants.

More than 50 speakers presented their papers or participated in the discussion with great synthesis and with punctuality. The public showed great interest and pleasure in in-depth discussions of scientific interest. Great enthusiasm was shown for the round table discussion on “defensive medicine” both from the point of view of discussion and for the solutions proposed by the judge, the legal doctor, the surgeon, by the president of AMAMI.

The “Live session” from London, which was unforeseen, added further interest to the discussion on the very debateable topic, the use of biological nets in the serious defects of the abdominal wall.

The papers of the last session which included videos on “Tips and tricks” of the most innovative techniques in the field of proctology, kept the audience stuck to their seats until the very end.
