DEAR COLLEAGUES

We are delighted to invite you to the next Tripartite Colorectal meeting in Birmingham next year. We are very excited about the event programme which promises to be packed with information, learning opportunities, interaction and exchanges of thought about our specialty.

Whatever the distance you have to travel, we hope that you will make this event a priority, and can assure you of a warm welcome in the fabulous city of Birmingham, a vibrant thriving city that now has so much to offer, as well as being incredibly well connected and accessible.

ACPGBI and the RSM are happy to welcome ESCP as a partner in the organization of the meeting and as you will see from the Programme Committee, it is very much a joint effort from all parties and we greatly look forward to working together.

We hope you will join us – the website will keep you up to date with all details for the meeting over the coming months. We hope to see you in Birmingham next summer!

With best wishes.

BIRMINGHAM

Birmingham is the most populous British city outside of London with 1,074,300 residents. It rose to international prominence in the 18th century during the Midlands Enlightenment and the subsequent Industrial Revolution, putting it at the forefront of worldwide advances in science, technology, and economics. By 1791, it was described as the 'first manufacturing town in the world'.

Today, Birmingham is a major international commercial centre with a GDP of $90 billion, and with everything from royal ballet and international art collections to premiership football and international cricket, world-class theatre and cuisine, there is something for everyone here. Birmingham is home to six leading universities and houses major cultural institutions such as the Birmingham Royal Ballet, City of Birmingham Symphony Orchestra, and the Barber Institute of Fine Arts. The city is also home to the world class Edgbaston Cricket Ground. Among the city's many other attractions are the jewellery quarter – the largest jewellery making centre in Europe, and more parks, open spaces, and canals than any other city in Europe.

Birmingham lies at the very heart of the UK and is a major hub for British and international business. As well as great road and rail connections, its airport provides a link to over 100 national and international destinations, making it one of the most accessible cities in the UK.

CONGRESS VENUE

The ICC is located on the site originally occupied by Bingley Hall, the world's first purpose built exhibition hall. Building work was started in 1984 and took almost 4 and half years to complete. The ICC was officially opened by H.M. Queen Elizabeth II in June 1991 and has since hosted many important meetings including the G8 summit in 1998 and the Conservative Party's annual conference in 2008 and 2010.

As a state of the art building, the ICC has won several design awards, which include the Institution of Civil Engineers Project Award in 1992.

The ICC is located only 8 miles from Birmingham International Airport and is minutes away from the heart of Birmingham, offering easy access to all of the city's top hotels and attractions.
